Emergency Management

In Florida, the Cowbell Fire on Big Cypress National Preserve has burned 16,944 (+1,055) acres. The fire is 38 (+27)-percent contained and managed by a Type-2 Incident Management Team with 261 (+15) personnel, including 72 (+5) DOI personnel. There are 25 (no change) residences threatened, and the containment date remains April 30. Up to one half inch of rain was received in the vicinity of the Cowbell Fire on Wednesday, resulting in some reduction in fire behavior during the operational period.

In response to the recent hexavalent chromium spill near Indiana Dunes National Lakeshore near Chesterton, Indiana, Cowles Bog Beach, West Beach, the Portage Lakefront, and the Riverwalk have been closed by the National Park Service until further notice. The EPA recommended closures within 3 miles of the spill. Trails at Cowles Bog Beach remain open.

Media of Interest

BLM's Plans Lease Sale Of 100,000 Colorado Acres For Drilling.

Additional coverage that the Bureau of Land Management is planning "to auction approximately 100,000 acres of federal public lands in northern Colorado for oil and gas drilling" was provided by the Colorado Independent (4/12, Ray).

Interior Officials Meet With Tribal Leaders To Save Navajo Generating Station.

The Washington Examiner (4/13, Siciliano) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and other officials on Wednesday "met with Native American leaders to brainstorm ways" the Trump Administration "can help prevent" the Navajo Generating Station from shutting down. David Palumbo, deputy commissioner for operations at the Bureau of Reclamation, "said the administration is hopeful they can reach an agreement to extend operations beyond 2019, but are planning for the worst if the plant is forced to close."

Secretary Zinke Halts Plan To Transfer National Bison Range To Tribal Control.

The Missoulian (MT) (4/12, Chaney) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke has "reversed course on plans to hand management of the National Bison Range to the Bureau of Indian Affairs." Zinke's "move casts doubt on the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes' plans to take control of the wildlife sanctuary in the middle of the Flathead Indian Reservation." According to the article, "saying he was committed to not selling or transferring public land, Zinke said Wednesday that the tribes 'would play a pivotal role in our discussions about the best path forward.'" Zinke said, "I took a hard look at the current proposal suggesting a new direction for the National Bison Range and assessed what this would mean for Montana and the nation. As Secretary, my job is to look 100 years forward at all of Interior's resources. I recognize the Bison Range is a critical part of our past, present and future, which is why I have changed course."

Secretary Zinke To Deliver Commencement Address At University Of Montana.

In an analysis, the Campus Reform (4/12) says that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "(who is speaking at the University of Montana) is the only one of President Trump's senior officials to have secured a commencement slot."

Conservation Group, Rep. Grijalva File Lawsuit Over Border Wall.

The AP (4/12) reports the Center for Biological Diversity conservation group and Rep. Raul

Grijalva (D-AZ) filed a federal lawsuit in Tucson on Wednesday against the proposed border wall. The lawsuit “seeks to require the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to put together a report on the environmental impact of construction of the wall and expanded operations on the U.S.-Mexico border.” The Hill (4/12, Cama) reports the conservation group “says its lawsuit is the first against the border wall since President Trump signed an executive order in January to start building it.”

Land Transfer Advocates Turn Focus To Monuments.

The High Country (CO) News (4/12, Wiles) reports that advocates of public land transfers have turned their attention to rescinding national monument designations. The article notes that President Trump has “indicated he does not support” land transfers and Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “explicitly opposes a transfer.” However, Trump and Zinke “haven’t been vocal about their plans for national monuments, or for the Antiquities Act.”

National Historic Vehicle Register To Display Newest Inductees On National Mall.

WTOP-FM Washington (4/12, Clabaugh) reports that the National Historic Vehicle Register will “put on public display on the National Mall its three newest inductees beginning Wednesday.” According to the article, “all three cars were center stage on the National Mall Wednesday morning to mark the opening ceremony of the third annual Cars at the Capital exhibition.” The exhibition is part of the Historic Vehicle Association’s partnership with the Interior Department, Historic American Engineering Record and Library of Congress archives.

Investigators Find Inappropriate Workplace Behavior At Yellowstone.

The AP (4/12, Freking) reports that “federal investigators said Wednesday they have found credible evidence that male supervisors and staff in the maintenance division at Yellowstone National Park created a work environment that included unwelcome and inappropriate comments and actions toward women.” The Interior Department’s inspector general “concluded that the division’s supervisor should have known about and addressed some of the alleged misconduct.” The report “said more than 100 current and former employees were interviewed and 500-plus documents were reviewed, including this past year’s exit survey of more than 200 seasonal Yellowstone employees.” In all, “the report said that between 2010 and 2016, six women who had previously worked in the maintenance unit had been subjected to derogatory comments or actions that made them feel uncomfortable.” The article says that “most employees interviewed — male and female — have told investigators they had not personally experienced or witnessed sexual harassment at the park.”
